

Highly Experienced

With 20 years on the Board, Jane stands alone among board aspirants in the experience and knowledge she brings to it.

She knows issues. She knows how ideas are developed and board decisions are made.

Over two decades she's learned what's doable as a board, the importance of board consensus and how to achieve it while respecting legitimate differences.

She also brings the rich perspectives of:

- a parent as mother of four college educated ETHS graduates
- a teacher as one herself for 31 years
- a policy leader as current vice president and former president of the Board
- an administrative leader as a former interim head of school for Evanston's Chiaravalle Montessori School

Skillful Leader

Jane has worked hard to:

- help recruit and support our highly qualified superintendent and business manager
- communicate the culture and ambitions of the community to the current administration
- build board understanding and focus on issues critical to the District's future
- maintain our national reputation for scholastic distinction
- engender a team culture among Board, administration and staff
- assure a safe school environ and increased civility
- deepen understanding of the challenges and rewards of school diversity
- support and promote teacher excellence and professional growth

Committed to Community

Jane has tirelessly volunteered her skills, especially for young people. She has served as PTA president at both Dewey and Nichols Schools, PTSA Co-President at ETHS, and two term President of the Candidates Nominating Committee (CNC).

She has helped at-risk youth for many years as a member of COE Moms & Pops. For 18 years she has co-chaired the Picture-book Project at Family Focus, an innovative literacy program for teen moms and their babies.

Fiscally Responsible

As a board member Jane has successfully pressed for fiscal discipline while working closely with the community and the superintendent's administration to make prudent budget allocations among broad academic offerings, competitive teacher and staff salaries and progressive pedagogical growth.

During each of the last four fiscal years, she has helped maintain a balanced budget. The District has an enviable Moody Aaa-1 bond rating, shared by only 9 other school districts in Illinois.

She has urged increased public participation in budget decisions through offsite community conversations in addition to public comment during scheduled Board presentations.

Committed to all Students

Jane remains committed to providing the best education we can and real access to it for every student. She is particularly encouraged by the District's newest initiative to address student underachievement through wider rigor and classroom restructuring without compromising high student performance.

The project, unanimously supported by the board, was developed after intensive study, expert guidance, promising trials and thorough staff preparation. It is scheduled to start modestly, be wisely evaluated, carefully vetted and continued and expanded only as success warrants.

Jane is highly suited to provide the prudent support and vigilance the community expects for this worthy initiative.
